Annual Meeting of Griffin Health Services Corporation

Just as we have been pioneers in the movement to change the way health services are delivered, so must we prepare ourselves for a future in health care based on an increasingly competitive managed care environment and an organization's effectiveness at preventing illness and keeping people out of the hospital. The health care world must transform itself to being consumer sensitive, including providing complementary health services that meet the public's needs and expectations, and to empower individuals and provide them with the knowledge needed to take an active role in their own health.

Realities
of Health Care*

John Bustelos

Robert L. Fiscus

During the last 12 months the vision for Griffin Health Services started to manifest in many important ways. The vision, first articulated by the Board of Directors, management, employees, and members of the medical staff during 1988-89, sees Griffin improving the quality of life for all we serve and all who live within our service areas and, to improve the health of those we serve and who serve Griffin. This vision has as its premise that health is not just the absence of disease, but rather, it is a state in which the body, mind, and spirit is integrated, aligned, and whole; that medical crises prove to be an awakening which in turn can provide an opportunity for healing, even when a cure is not possible.

The past decade presented Griffin with significant challenge and change. Events during the past year have demonstrated that a heart-felt vision combined with hard work and commitment can propel us on a course that allows the creation of a future of our making and which will allow us to continue to serve our community.

Griffin's vision of a progressive organization, with a modern physical plant, providing a healing and loving environment in which patients and families take an active role in their health and well-being is becoming more of a reality each day. The most obvious manifestation was the opening of the North Wing last June, during which more than 5,000 individuals had the opportunity to visit with us and witness the enthusiasm and pride of our employees and volunteers as they demonstrated the state-of-the-art building and patient-focused care process to our visitors. Since then we have been visited by hundreds of individuals from across America and several foreign countries to learn first hand what the Griffin family has accomplished.

Evidence that we have created a healing environment worthy of our vision include major articles by three American Hospital Association publications; two feature stories in the New York Times; and major cover stories in Prevention and Consumer Reports magazines. C.B.S. This Morning and WTNH-TV's "First Look" provided extensive coverage of the North Wing to fuel the interest of thousands of individuals throughout Connecticut and the United States. Additional evidence of the impact Griffin is having on the health care industry occurred at the Planetree Annual Hospital Alliance Conference last October. The Planetree Alliance, of which Griffin is one of 30 members, is committed to creating healing environments in which patients—not caregivers—are the center of attention and in which patients are encouraged to be active participants in their care. Participants at the conference were overwhelmed by the advances Griffin had made in establishing the first hospital where all care—even in the Critical Care Unit—is provided in a patient-focused manner in an environment which is friendly and healing.

Griffin's commitment to empowering individuals to take an active role in their own healing also led during the past 12 months to the establishment of two new outpatient programs now drawing patients from throughout Connecticut. These two initiatives are the Heart Disease Reversal Program and the Stress Reduction Program. The Heart Disease Reversal Program requires participants to engage in comprehensive lifestyle changes that can lead to improved cardiovascular functioning. A number of individuals who a year ago thought they would have to undergo bypass surgery or angioplasty are continuing in the Griffin program without these procedures.

*The New Realities
of Health Care*

The Stress Reduction Program is based on the program which has been functioning for more than 10 years under the direction of Jon Kabat-Zinn at the University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester, MA. Utilizing mindfulness meditation, light stretching and other techniques to align body, mind, and spirit, the program is helpful for individuals with many chronic conditions whose symptoms seem not to be amendable to additional medical treatment.

Griffin's commitment to the health of the communities we serve led to the restructuring of our medical residency to be more focused on primary care, community health and preventive medicine. Griffin's support for and participation in the "Healthy Valley 2000" project is an additional example of our vision coming to fruition. Griffin also took on a more assertive leadership role for the successful Parish Nurse Program which had originally been initiated by Griffin and Catholic Family Services.

While the year saw a number of efforts by Griffin become reality, as significant, but not necessarily as visible, changes were also underway to even better position Griffin for the continually changing health care environment. Key to these changes will be an energized and more focused Suburban Health Plan working in concert with a range of primary care providers to establish an integrated delivery system that will be able to provide primary and preventive services in an environment in which more and more health care will be paid for by health maintenance organizations on a prospective, capitated arrangement. Capitation provides a fixed payment for caring for an insured individual(s). To the extent that a person remains healthy and uses the least costly health services available, the contracted organization profits. If the individual is hospitalized and uses expensive medical services, the organization suffers economically. This changes the way we do business and look at care. The transition to capitation will be challenging and difficult. It reverses many of our concepts of what success represents, we must master a new way of viewing and acting within these changes.

Unlike other hospitals in Connecticut, Griffin Hospital has the HMO, Suburban Health Plan, as a sister subsidiary. More and more attention will be focused during the coming months outside the hospital toward the establishment of the network of care competent to accept capitation and the risk for the cost of care of enrollees.

The achievements of the past year speak well for us and our ability to survive during what has been termed an age of "chaos, rapid change and restructuring." The future will require that we build on our experiences; that we focus on health, not illness; and that all of our systems and constituencies work together to build the best, most comprehensive, integrated system of health care and delivery system responsive to the needs of our community and to the individuals who pay for these services.

Poising Ourselves for the Future

Kenneth V. Schwartz, M.D.

As of April, 1995, Griffin Hospital has been in its new quarters for nine months, with the renovations of the rest of the facility nearly completed. We have been the subject of much publicity and many accolades for our planning, foresight and implementation of a new model of care combined with a physical plant which is the envy of many a health care organization. While we can rightly congratulate ourselves on our successes, we need to realize that the health care industry is changing very rapidly and we cannot sit on our laurels.

The explosion of managed care will change the way we do business and we need to change with it. Our next thrust will be to position ourselves in the marketplace by combining our new quarters, model of care, medical staff and management into a viable player in the managed care game. The medical staff is poised to contribute to the further success of the organization and we look forward to the exciting changes which lay ahead.
