

If you need to make healthcare decisions on my behalf, this is what matters to me:	Very Important	Somewhat Important	Not Important
Be able to say goodbye to family and loved ones
Human touch and voice, even if I can't or don't appear to respond
Know who I am, where I am, and who I am with
Have my values, beliefs and priorities known and respected
Live as long as possible
Not be short of breath
Be free from anxiety
Be free from pain
To not hallucinate
Be physically comfortable (moist lips, a cold compress if I have a fever, keep me clean, change sheets and clothing regularly and when needed etc.)
To be treated with respect and dignity
Have family and friends know and respect my wishes, even if they are not decisions they would make
Be able to communicate with others
Be spiritually at peace
Not be unable to come off a ventilator
Be able to discuss my fears and concerns
To have my family and loved ones with me
Have my doctor treat me as a person and not just a patient
Not dying alone
To have someone who will listen to me
Honor my wishes for what I want – and don't want – for health care treatment
To feel that my life has had meaning and purpose
Have my family prepared for my death
Have my financial affairs in order
Some quiet time alone
Time with my spiritual advisor or a chaplain
Be able to talk with my doctor honestly about my health and options
Have my funeral arrangements made
Not being a burden to my family
To die at home
To be able to support others
